SCHERZO IN E MINOR

Biographical Sketch—Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy

Born in Hamburg, Germany, February 3, 1809

Died in Leipsic, Germany, November 14, 1847

FELIX MENDELSSOHN was of pure Jewish extraction, being the grandson of the distinguished philosopher, Moses Mendelssohn. He was, however, baptized as a Lutheran Christian, and his given name was Jacob Ludwig Felix. His father was a wealthy banker in Berlin, and Felix started life with all the advantages that a refined and artistic environment could bring. His talent for music developed itself at a very early age, and when only seventeen he had composed one of his finest works, the exquisite Midsummer Night's Dream overture. He was the founder and the first director of the Leipsic Conservatory of Music, and in 1840 he was appointed director of the department of music in the Academy of Fine Arts at Berlin. The greater part of his life was spent in Berlin, Leipsic, and Düsseldorf, and he made long visits to England, where he was held in the highest regard. He aroused and stimulated interest in the works of the great Johann Sebastian Bach, of whom he was an enthusiastic admirer, and was instrumental in bringing several other musicians to the notice of the world.

Poetic Idea: In Mendelssohn's twenty-first year, he made a trip to England, appearing as conductor and soloist in London, and visiting spots of interest in Scotland, England, and Wales. His host in Wales had three charming daughters who were the inspiration of the three Capriccios, Opus 16. One of the sisters, describing the origin of these pieces, once wrote: "There was in my sister Honora's garden a pretty creeping plant, covered with little trumpet-like flowers. Mendelssohn was struck with it, and played for her the music which the fairies might play on those trumpets. When he wrote out the piece, he drew a little branch of that flower up the margin of the paper." Mendelssohn was fond of calling this Scherzo his trumpet piece.

At the first tiny trumpet call, the fairy chase is on. The hunt gradually becomes hot and furious and the uproar is quite fearful, at least for fairies. The din soon subsides and the fairy troop fades away into the night.

Form and Structure: Although many Scherzos are in Three-Part Song-Form, this particular Scherzo is constructed on a plan more closely resembling the Sonata-Allegro Form. There is a first subject in E minor (meas. 5-8), and a second subject in B minor (meas. 21-24). These are recapitulated, the first briefly (meas. 64; 66-67), the second completely in E minor (meas. 74-77). The first sentence with its four-measure extension runs to 12 measures (5-16); the second sentence with a 6-measure extension occupies 14 measures (21-34). The 5 measures of transition (35-39) following this are extended to 8 measures in the recapitulation (meas. 88-95). The second theme bears a family resemblance to the first, being obviously derived from the first three notes in meas. 8. The lyrical theme at meas. 70-73 is rhythmically related to the tune at meas. 25-26. This in turn is but an extension of the first four notes at meas. 7. Thematically, the Trumpet Motive (meas. 1-4) is of the utmost importance for it provides the episodes which unify the whole composition. It occurs in chords or octaves (meas. 62-63; 65; 68-69; 96-98), combined with fragments of the first theme (meas. 17-20; 40-47), and finally form the basis of an extended development in broken chords culminating in a bravura octave passage (meas. 48-61). An ethereal Coda in E major (meas. 99-108) brings the piece to a fitting close.

Interpretation: A delicately crisp staccato and great rhythmic precision are the outstanding requirements of this composition. Great care must be taken to pedal exactly as indicated. The pedal is utilized not only to emphasize accents but above all to enhance the tone coloring. Inaccuracy in the pedal releases will result in tasteless blurring.

Play the grace note B in meas. 7 as if it and the preceding B were sixteenth notes. The horn call in the left hand at meas. 30-31; 33-34; 83-84; 86-87, must be made rather prominent. The crescendo at meas. 48-53 must be very carefully graduated. The difficult repeated octaves in sixteenths at meas. 53-57, may be played as broken octaves beginning on the upper note. The octave E in the left hand at meas. 99 and 101 may be played an octave lower. The running passage at meas. 99-102 must be played with the very lightest of finger touches; the chords following with the most delicate of staccatos.

Music Education

vs.

Imitation of the Teacher

Music Education is no longer a luxury. It has become a part of our everyday life, and is of vital importance to every cultured person. But, there is a vast difference between a Music Education and the ability to move the fingers over the keyboard to produce a succession of sounds. In one case, there is initiative and musical understanding—the other is mechanical mimicry of the teacher.

A Music Education for a piano student consists of two things:

- (1) A mind trained to understand the fundamentals and construction of music, and the principles which underlie piano playing.
- (2) Hands trained to execute the will of the educated mind.

Equipped with a true Music Education, the student is materially assisted in his own playing—he can draw on his store of accumulated knowledge and make independent progress—he can understand and appreciate the artistry of others.

Lacking a Music Education, the student can only mimic the teacher—there is no musical inspiration—he has no foundation of music knowledge upon which he can build and progress.

This Composition offers the student not only the music score with authoritative pedaling, fingering and phrasing—but also the poetic idea of the composer in writing this particular number, and annotations on proper interpretation. The entire Progressive Series Course is just as complete, just as sound pedagogically and musically as this composition.

Talent in music is not essential to the acquirement of a practical education in music. The Progressive Series of Piano Lessons enables the music instructor to impart a Music Education with the same success and results with which academic subjects are taught in the public schools.
